A VOICE IN A DREAM.

It was only a voice in a dream,
But it spake to me sweet and low.
Twas a voice that I used to know
When it cheered my way
In the golden day

Twas not strange that I gave a start When its deep tones entered my heart, That in loneness sighed

Of a summer long ago.

It was only a voice in a dream;

As its pulse replied:

It was only a voice in a dream;

And not far away.

Sales for September for the forenoon ranged: Wheat, 83%,@84c; corn, 44%,@44%c and 44%c; mess pork, $13,605(13,60)4. There was light trading in corn. The market appeared to be little affected by outside reports and it was not disturbed by outside orders. Opening prices were about %c lower. There was no anxiety to sell at any price, but for lack of support the price went off slightly and closed about Mc lower. The closing prices for the September option show the following results in comparison with vesterdays closing figures: Wheat, Me lower; corn, Me lower; oats, Me higher; pork, 17/2c higher; hard, 2/2c

THE BEGGARS OF PARIS. A LIVELY DESCRIPTION OF THEIR HAUNTS AND HABITS.

George Birdseye in Detroit Free Pres

Taking a Census of the Mendicants of Paris-Peculiar Characteristics of the Beggars' Special Quarter-In Bygone

Times-Heavy Penalties. To take a census of beggars-an operation which, more probably for the fiftieth than for the first time, has just been performed by the Paris prefecture of police —must in many respects be regarded as a task about as thankless, if not as useless, as that of weaving a rope of sand. To ascertain the aggregate of professional mendicancy in a great metropolis like Paris is by no means a trustworthy crite-rion of the amount of poverty existing. As in London, the vast majority of the beggars in Lutetia are the professional ones—that is to say, rank impostors—and their numbers will probably show a ten-dency to increase rather than to diminish with the improvement in trade and the augmentation of affluence among the classes who are begged from but do not beg.

Our Paris correspondent tells us, indeed, that the "gueux," or habitual beg-gars, are at present in an exceptionally thriving condition, and are making money thriving condition, and are making money more easily in consequence of the more largely developed liberality of the alms-giving public. It is even stated that these professional paupers have two di-rectories of their own, in which the names and addresses of Good Samaritans with plenty of money are duly entered, to-gether with a description of the stratams which experience has shown to be nost efficacious in extracting cash from the unwary. The first directory is called the "Gulde of the Grand Jeu," or "Big Game," and costs no less than six francs. There is a smaller "Guide of the Petit Jeu," which only costs half the money, and gives the addresses of more middle class philanthropists. These red boks for rogues contain full instructions to the "gueux" as to what shall be their de-meanor in the presence of people who are likely to unloose their purse strings when

Whatever may be the statistical worth of the census of vagrancy just compiled, there can be little doubt that the returns obtained by the patient enumerators of the prefecture of police have considerable social value, inasmuch as they denote changes in national manners and prove that, although the Parisian beggars are numerically still a formidable folk, they have almost ceased to be picturesque. The "Coar des Miracles," which Victor Hugo has immortalized in "Notre Dame de Paris," still nominally exists in a peaceable passage near the Rue Montorguell; but it is a vastly different place from the Cith. from the filthy area, surrounded by tum-ble down tenements, which throughout the Middle Ages was at once the St. Giles and the Alsatia of the French capital. Excursion Rates to the Ohio Centennial Exposi-tion. The beggars' special quarter enjoyed the privilege of sanctuary, and was ruled over by an elective king, who was assisted by a council including sundry "dukes of Egypt" and nobles of the empire of Galilee—all beggars.

One of the peculiar characteristics of the place was its utter silence and abandonment in the day time; not even the precincts. They were all abroad cadging. The paralytics, beds and all, had been re-moved and hid down at the street corners, there to excite the pity of the passors by. The dogs, of course, were ngaged on business leading the blind men about the streets; the very babies had been taken out begging. But at night this mute and deserted Cour des Miracles became a Gehenna, a carnival of noise, drunkenness and profligacy; and it was solden that the carousals of the "francsinitous," or beggars, and the "refodes," or tramps, terminated without

The beggars of bygone times in France may not have had their directories, which, even had they possessed them, would have been questionably beneficial, insamuch as the bulk of the vagabond comunity were unable to read or Nevertheless, it is worthy of remark that, so long ago as 1561, when a kind of pauper census was taken, by order of Henry II, the impostors therein unmasked answered almost exactly to the character of the professional mendicants who in modern times have infested, and who continue to infest society, not only in Paris but in London. Shivering beggars and epileptic beggars—so far as epilepsy can be simulated by chewing soap—variets who pre-tended to be dropsical or who exhibited sores, begus cripples and spurious hunchtionery.

CRUELTY TO CHILDREN. What Becomes of the Unfortunate Infants of the Metropolis. For some time the business of baby farming has been increasing in this city. from the most squalid East Side localities to the magnificent and luxurious mansions on the ultra fashionable avenues. In this city every year an average of about 300 unfortunate infants are picked up in ash barrels, in ball ways, on the streets, and frequently in the river. These are nearly all the children of poor and indiscreet young women, who in an evil hour gave heed to the voice of the tempter. Many of these children find their way into regular institutions which are incorporated for business of that description. such as the Foundling asylum, and a number of religious concerns where pro-vision is made for the little waifs. But by far the great majority are "farmed out" to women who for a consideration care for the children or help to end their miserable lives, as the exigency of the case or the pecuniary interest involved may require

The mother in most cases is drawn from the humbler walks in life and can afford to pay but a small sum for the maintenance of her child. She accordingly seeks out one of the baby farmers, who thrive in every part of the tenement districts of the city, and there arranges for the reception and care of her little one. A fixed sum per week is decided upon, ranging according to location from $1 to $5, and the transaction is concluded. Perhaps the unfortunate mother is sometimes lucky enough to have as partner in her guilt one who will pay the weekly stipend. He furnishes the money for three or five or ten weeks, but with each succeeding payment be grows tired WANTED Borrowers for money, we place money at the lowest rates on all kinds of chatter seof the job, and finally he drops off alto-mingling with walfs of the common herd. As the matter is at present conducted in this city all applications from persons "to keep and maintain infants" are turned over to the Society for the Prevention health. The society investigates the moral surroundings of the applicant, and tary arrangements. When everything is found all right a permit is issued. The establishment at that point is lost eight of, and the board of health or the Children's society may know no more about there or the way they are treated than the emperor of Morocco. The viliainous wemen who, for a consideration, equivers the young lives out of so many little walfs year by year, adopt many and clever ruses to escape detection in their fool work, and they generally succeed. These people give such an uncerviable reputation to places occurrented and run on a purely legitimate basis that the unfortunate mothers are more frequently tempted to throw their helpless offspring into the depths of the North or East rivers than consign them to a fate that is worse than death itself.—New York
